Respective roles of hyaluronic acid and chondroitin-4-sulphate in the in vivo and in vitro interactions between rat oocyte and cumulus cells. The objective of this study was to measure hyaluronic acid and chondroitin-4-sulphate (C4S) synthesized by the oocyte and cumulus-cells, in the presence or the absence of fertilization, and to evaluate their relative roles in the complex interactions between oocyte and cumulus-cell. In the present study, rat oocytes and cumulus cells were aspirated and added separately or in co-culture to immobilized hyaluronidase or chondroitinase. Hyaluronic acid was metabolized and not displaced by cumulus-cell-mediated processes, while cumulus-cell-mediated degradation of C4S did not interfere with the hyaluronic acid synthesis by oocytes. In the presence of oocyte-derived hyaluronic acid, cumulus cells did not synthesize C4S; when oocyte-derived C4S was utilized, cumulus cell-mediated synthesis of C4S was impaired. Hyaluronic acid, synthes 3e33713323
