I am trying to do this because it's a bit tedious having to go back and forth between a debugger, python console, and Windows calculator to change variables and see the change in the GUI. Here's the code. def range(): start = int(input("Enter the starting number (1 - 100): ")) num = range(start) stop = int(input("Enter the ending number: ")) range_end = range(start, stop) return range_end def loop(): number = int(input("Enter the number: ")) amount = int(input("Enter the amount: ")) while number>amount: number -= amount print("Amount added: " + str(amount)) amount = int(input("Enter amount: ")) A: There are several examples of how to do that in the docs. The most appropriate method is (3rd example, Documentation 1.2.4 09e8f5149f
