
dopants to form the resistor. One of the limitations of polysilicon resistors is the limited range in resistor value. Additionally, the sheet resistance of polysilicon resistors have a fixed value for a given conductivity type. Thus, it is difficult to precisely match each resistor value on a chip. In light of the foregoing, it is an object of the present invention to provide for a semiconductor resistor with increased range in resistor value. It is another object of the present invention to provide for a semiconductor resistor which has a controlled value for a given conductivity type. These and other objects of the present invention are accomplished by the present invention, which is an apparatus and method for forming a semiconductor resistor. The apparatus includes a well region and a layer of doped polysilicon material, the polysilicon material having a predetermined conductivity type. The layers of doped polysilicon are provided as an overlying layer overlying the well region. The method includes the steps of implanting dopant in the overlying layer to form the polysilicon of the predetermined conductivity type. The foregoing and other objects, features, and advantages of the invention will be apparent from the following, more particular, description of the preferred embodiments of the invention, as illustrated in the accompanying drawings. Interactions of erythropoietin and its receptor with human cardiac proteins.
