I'm trying to figure out if there's a way to simulate the DNS lookup in a browser. I'm testing an application that uses a domain name instead of a computer name and a test account is no good. For example, I would like to simulate looking up the records for www.domain.com but the domain is not set up on my test machine. Is there a way to do that in Chrome or Firefox or IE? A: You could use curl. curl -s localhost You should get something like: localhost [127.0.0.1] (84) Connection refused [4] The court excluded evidence
